

0107 - Holiday Calendar Page - National BobbleHead Day

0107 - Holiday Calendar Page - National Bobblehead Day

Each year on January 7th, National Bobblehead Day recognizes a day of celebration for all spring-connected head bobbing figurines.

Rating: Not Rated Yet

Price

Ask a question about this product

Manufacturer Planners 4 Life

Description

NATIONAL BOBBLEHEAD DAY

For over 100 years, bobbleheads have been entertaining and fascinating fans and collectors. They come in a variety of shapes and sizes, too. Bobbleheads commemorate iconic teams, movies, and cartoon characters. Individually, they represent some of our most exciting athletes or thrilling television and movie characters.

Early bobbleheads, known as bobbbers or noddors, developed from Germany. They took root in the United States pop culture in the 1950s and 60s. Bobbleheads resurged in the late 1990s when professional sports teams began using them as promotional items. Today, as both toys and collectibles, bobbleheads continue to amuse and captivate us.

History of Bobblehead Day

Bobbleheads first came onto the scene over 100 years ago, being composed of a simple doll with a head attached by a spring, creating that signature bobble-head action. The first of these recognizable toys was actually thought to have been created in the mid 1800's, when plaster cats with bobbing heads were all the rage. In the 1920's the bobblehead came to sports, each being made exactly like the other. In the 1930's the love of these died off, only to be reborn in the 1960's when they started producing custom faces representing the most popular players of the time.

Since then the bobblehead craze has never really died down, growing in popularity and design over the ages. While not technically a 'bobblehead', hula dancers were an extremely popular rendition of this style of doll, often having two or more spring based joints throughout their design. When plastic bobblehead dolls were created in 1990's, the industry once more saw a boom that has carried through straight into modern day, with ever more customizable options being presented with each passing year.

#NationalBobbleheadDay

Reviews

There are yet no reviews for this product.